

Charity Royale

Jesse Stine and Becca Fiore

Garrett Gravesen, Suchita Vadlamani and Ryan Gembala

Loren Reeves and Jessica Muenster

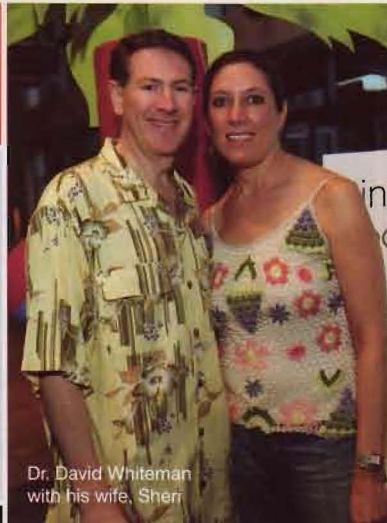

Tina Beckler and John Bonner

007 himself would have been proud. “Shaken, not Stirred,” a James Bond themed event held at Strip to benefit H.E.R.O. for Children had all the ingredients for a night of glitz and glamour with a charitable twist. Good Day Atlanta host Suchita Vadlamani played the role of a Bond Girl with perfect poise and mystery, while H.E.R.O. co-founders Garrett Gravesen and Ryan Gembala left much to the imagination as well in their luxe tuxes. Gravesen felt this “summer kick-off” for his charity was a hit, commenting, “The Agents of Change (a zealous band of entrepreneurs, philanthropists and young professionals responsible for the benefit) are set to give back a lot and drink just a little—shaken, not stirred, of course.”

The Power of Pink

Charitable tennis lovers and stylish pink enthusiasts alike turned out to the Gwinnett Center Grand Ballroom for the seventh annual VolleyFest Pink Party. This year’s theme, “Key West Style,” added additional summer flair to the event as the guests showed up in bright Hawaiian shirts and flirty floral dresses. Partygoers enjoyed live music by 7 sharp 9 while they indulged their taste buds with the many different restaurants featured in a “Taste of North Metro Atlanta”—all to support breast cancer care and prevention within the community. Mix red-hot fun with white Key West sand, and your result is a pink party to remember.

Dr. David Whiteman with his wife, Sherr

Vice President of VolleyFest Lynn Roberts with VolleyFest founder Sheila Stevens

Tommy and Chantal Bagwell, Anthony and Shannon Aisquith, and Candy and Bill Palmer

Jessica Roland, Carly Melaragno, Heather Burnham, Jodi Lewis and Natalie Litwin